AM I ELIGIBLE?

First-time homebuyers who purchase a primary residence on or after April 9, 2008 and before April 30, 2010 are eligible. If you (and your spouse, if married) have not owned a primary residence for a 3-year period before your purchase, and you have never taken advantage of the DC first-time homebuyer credit, you qualify as a first-time homebuyer. Starting November 7, 2009, buyers who have lived in their primary residence for five of the last eight years can also qualify for a tax credit. The credit for repeat buyers also expires April 30, 2010.*

*Current law allows potential buyers who enter into a written binding contract by April 30, 2010 to close by June 30, 2010 and still claim the credit.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Like all tax credits, it will DIRECTLY REDUCE THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF TAXES YOU OWE. When you file your taxes, for the year you purchased your home, you will be able to subtract the amount of the credit from your Federal income tax liability, increasing the size of your refund or reducing the amount you owe. For example, if your 'normal' tax return shows that you owe $2,000 in taxes, with this credit, your tax liability could be lowered by $8,000—which means, in this example, you instead get a $6,000 tax REFUND check from the IRS.

AVAILABLE AT CLOSING!

When the credit was first passed, money was not available until a buyer filed a tax return after the home purchase. Several states – 18 and counting – creatively found ways to make cash available to buyers at closing through their state housing finance agencies. The Federal government followed suit. On May 29, 2009, the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced guidelines for FHA lenders that enable them to make the credit available to buyers to cover closing costs or a down payment above the 3.5 percent required for an FHA insured loan. This means the credit can be available at closing regardless of where you're purchasing if your lender participates in this program. Check with your state housing finance agency as well as your lender for details.

HOW BIG IS THE TAX CREDIT?

THE TAX CREDIT IS EQUAL TO 10% OF THE PURCHASE PRICE OF YOUR HOME UP TO $8,000 FOR FIRST-TIME BUYERS AND UP TO $6,500 FOR MOST OTHER BUYERS.

The full credit is available for single individuals whose adjusted gross income is less than $125,000. If your adjusted gross income is greater than $125,000 and your home purchase qualifies you for the full credit, the credit phases out according to the dollar amount as shown in the chart below.

For married couples filing jointly, the credit begins to phase out at an adjusted gross income of $225,000. The dollar amounts in the chart below correspond to a phase out of the full tax credit.

WHAT ELSE IS NEW?

Income limits have been raised for the extended and expanded tax credit (effective November 7, 2009). To qualify, the purchase price of the home cannot exceed $800,000. An earlier version of the tax credit had a payback provision. The credit does not need to be repaid for purchases in 2009 and 2010, but a mild recapture provision remains. If you sell your home within 3 years of purchase, the entire amount of the credit is recaptured, that is, the government takes it back. Also, dependents are not eligible for the credit as of November 7, 2009. Finally, purchase documentation must now be included with the tax return in order to claim the credit.

ARE THERE OTHER CONDITIONS I SHOULD KNOW ABOUT?

- You cannot claim both the DC and the national First-time Homebuyer tax credit.
- Purchases by non-resident aliens are not eligible.
- 2009 and 2010 purchases financed by proceeds from a qualified mortgage issue are eligible.
- Any single family residence located in the United States that will be used as a primary residence and is purchased for $800,000 or less is eligible. Generally, a primary residence is the place where an individual spends most of his/her time. This includes single-family detached homes, condos or co-ops, townhouses or any similar type of new or existing dwelling.
- The credit will not result in an individual owing additional federal taxes under the Alternative Minimum Tax.
- Home purchases between relatives and other gifts of residences are not eligible for the credit.
- Other tax benefits of homeownership are still in place. The mortgage interest deduction, capital gains tax exclusion, and property tax deduction are some well-known examples.
- There is a recapture provision if you sell the home within three years of purchase.
